r र, The fifteenth (or, if we count the aspirates ch, kh, and ph as separate letters, the eighteenth) consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet in the Roman character. It is the twenty-seventh (or, if we count ś, śh, and z, the thirtieth) consonant when written in the Śāradā or the Nāgarī character, and the fifteenth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character.

In the language of educated persons of the City, this letter is sounded much as in India, but is more dental than in the central portion of the Ganges Valley, where the sound is classed as cerebral. In Kashmīr, on the contrary, the sound is dental, and in village talk and in old poetry is not unfrequently interchangeable with that of a dental l. This fact is recognized by the Paṇḍits of the City, who have a stock phrase, ra-layōr aikyatā, signifying that r and l are identical in nature. In the modern speech of the educated, the two letters are nevertheless distinguished both in sound and in writing. On the other hand, in the old Kāshmīrī of L.V. 74, we find chōr, a torrent, where the modern language has chūl; and, similarly, in H. viii, 13, we find the literary word môl^{u}, a father, pronounced mōr by Hātim, the rustic narrator of the story. Cf. also such pairs as lubr and rudr, both names of the god Śiva.

In the village dialect r is often sounded something like the cerebral ṛ of India. This latter sound is not formally recognized in the literary language by the use of any special character, so that, e.g. from the spelling of the word कुरु it is impossible to say whether a villager would say kūr^{u} or kūṛ^{u}. Paṇḍits do, however, implicitly admit the existence of this cerebral ṛ-sound by writing in certain words the letter ḍ, while, in attempting to illustrate the village pronunciation of the same word, they write r, the r in this case representing the cerebral sound. Thus, for their own dialect, they write kaḍun, to drag out, while, for the village dialect, they write karun, meaning thereby kaṛun. Similarly they write the literary shāḍun, to seek, but for the village dialect they write shārun. Again, in the literary language, they have both garun and gaḍun, to make, in which the r of garun represents the ṛ of the village gaṛun. This cerebralization of r is not uniform even in the village dialect, the sound varying from place to place, and sometimes, even in villages, we hear ḍ, not ṛ, where the literary dialect has r. Thus, the literary word kūr^{u}, a girl, is pronounced kūḍ^{u} in the country near Bārāmūla, where, according to El., s.v. kúḍ, 'there is a great tendency to change r into ḍ.' In the present work, which deals only with the literary, or standard, form of the language, the spelling of the Paṇḍits is followed, but, when their spelling of the village sounds is known, it is also given. Many instances of the interchange between ḍ and ṛ will be found in H., pp lxxix ff.

It is well known that, unlike the Indo-Aryan languages, but like the other Dardic languages, Kāshmīrī has no hesitation in preserving unchanged an original conjunct consonant of which the second member is r. Thus, we have brõt^{u}, error, compared with the Skt. bhrānti-; grôn^{u}, an eclipse, for Skt. grahaṇa-; phryūst^{u}, excellent, for Skt. praśasta-; trih, three, for Skt. tri-, and many others. Similarly, even when there was no original conjunct, we find such words as drölid, Skt. daridra-, poor; drôt^{u}, Skt. dātra-, a sickle; dryuy^{u}, Skt. dēvara-, a brother-in-law; krond^{u}, Skt. karaṇḍa-, a basket; krāl, Skt. kulāla-, a potter; krĕhon^{u}, Skt kṛṣṇa-, black; trēsh, Skt. tṛṣṇa-, thirst; shran, Skt. snāna-, bathing; shrūkh, Skt. ślōka, a verse; shrōtsun, to become pure, Skt. √śudh-, and so on. There are several words in which the insertion of such a conjunct r is optional, the form with r being chiefly used by Hindūs, and that without r being chiefly used by Musalmāns. Such are brōṭh or bõṭh, in front; shrâṭh or shāṭh, a river shoal; and zrôḍ^{u} or zôḍ^{u}, a water-hole.

In schools, this letter, in the Śāradā character, whether standing by itself or the first member of a conjunct consonant is called raka rö रक रो. If it is the final member of a conjunct, as in the syllable kra क्र, it is called dutarikh दुतरिख.

The Sanskrit vowel ṛ ऋ sometimes appears in Kāshmīrī writing, in borrowed words. It is said to be pronounced as ru रु, as in krupun^{u}, niggardly, written क्रपुन्, in imitation of the Skt. kṛpaṇaḥ कृपणः; but, especially at the beginning of a word, or in the case of words in common use, the character signifies the sound of rĕ र्ॅ, and is used optionally as a method of indicating that sound. In such cases it is written ऋॅ, as in rĕth ऋॅथ्, a month; krĕhon^{u} क्रॅहंनु, black; rĕy, written ऋॅय or र्यॅय्, an ant. This rĕ is liable to the ordinary rules of epenthesis, so that when followed by u-mātrā, it is liable to be sounded as ryo or ryu. Thus, ऋॅशु, a saint, is pronounced ryosh^{u}, ryush^{u}, or even as rĕsh^{u}. The sg. dat. is, however, always rĕshis ऋॅशिस्, because here there is no epenthesis. So क्रॅमू, a tortoise, is pronounced krüm^{ü}, while the same word, with another spelling (क्रम्), is pronounced krum.

Whether initial or non-initial, in schools, the Skt. letter ऋ is called rĕnav rĕ ऋॅनव् ऋॅ, and the corresponding long vowel-sign ॠ is called r^{a}khav r^{ü} र्खव् रू or rūkhav rū ऋखव् ऋ.

The Śāradā letter corresponding to the Nāgarī ru रु is called rukharī rō रुखरी रो, and that corresponding to the Nāgarī रू rū is called rā ar kharā rū रा अर् खराँ रू.

(2) Rāma-candra also (see bel.) called Rāma-bhadra. He was the seventh incarnation of Viṣṇu, was the husband of Sītā and the hero of the great Skt. epic, the Rāmâyaṇa. His story is told in the Kāshmīrī language in the Śrī-Rāmāvatāra-carita of the poet Divākara-prakāśa Bhaṭṭa, quoted in this dictionary as 'Rām.' (3) Bala-rāma, who, according to some, was an incarnation of the serpent-god Śēṣa, and according to others the eighth incarnation of Viṣṇu. He was the seventh son of Vasudēva and Dēvakī, but before birth was transferred to the womb of Rōhiṇī in order to save him from the cruelty of Kaṁsa. He was the elder brother of Kṛṣṇa, who was himself the eighth incarnation of Viṣṇu. He was also called Haladhara, or the plough-bearer, see hal 1, p. 330*a*, l. 8, and K. 46 ff.

rōzawañ रोज़वञ् f. wages for remaining (Gr.Gr. 129).

razöy[i] रज़ाय़ि, । नीशारविशेषः a wadded quilt, a coloured coverlet.

s स् س. The Kāshmīrī dental sibilant. The sixteenth consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet in the Roman character, the thirty-second (or, if we count ṣ, sh, and z, the thirty-fifth) consonant when written in the Śāradā or the Nāgarī character, and the eighteenth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. The Kāshmīrī name for character स is süssö. The letter is sounded like the s in the English word 'sin'. It is also used to represent the sound of the Arabic ś ث (sé) and ṣ ص (ṣād), which, in Kāshmīrī, occur only in words borrowed directly or indirectly from that language. In such cases they are both pronounced in Kāshmīrī like an ordinary s.

The palatal sibilant is sh श् ش, which is the thirtieth (or, if we count ṣ, sh, and z, the thirty-third) consonant when written in the Śāradā or the Nāgarī character, and the nineteenth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. The Kāshmīrī name for the character श is shĕkar-shö. It is sounded like sh in the English word 'shell'. It is also used to represent the sound of the Sanskrit letter ṣ ष्, which, in Kāshmīrī, is written by Paṇḍits in words borrowed directly or indirectly from that language. In such cases, in speaking Kāshmīrī, it is pronounced like sh. Thus, the word pōsh पोश्, a flower, is often written पोष् by Paṇḍits because of the existence of the letter ṣ ष् in the Sanskrit word puṣpa- पुष्प with the same meaning. The Kāshmīrīs call this letter ष 'phör^{i}-shö'.

These sibilants, s and sh, are liable to various changes in Ksh., the principal of which will here be mentioned. When sh represents a single (i.e. non-conjunct) Sanskrit ś or ṣ, the ś or ṣ when taken into Kāshmīrī, in the first place becomes h. Thus, Skt. śāka-, a vegetable, becomes Ksh. hāk-; Skt. śiraḥ, a head, > Ksh. hir; Skt. laśuna-, garlic, > Ksh. rahun; Skt. viṁśati-, twenty, > Ksh. wuh; √upariś-, sit, > √běh-; √piṣ-, grind, > √pih-; viṣa-, poison, > vĕh; pārśva-, a rib, > (through pāśa-*) pāh-; dvādaśī, the twelfth day of a lunar fortnight, > bāh; praśasta-, good, prahasta-, > phraasta-, > phrayasta-, > Ksh. phrēst- (see phryūst^{u}); and so on for many others.

While Skt. ś and ṣ thus become Ksh. h, it appears that the dental s does not undergo this change. The word shwās or shāh, breath (Skt. śrāsa-), is only an apparent exception to this statement. If we compare the word with the Aryan šušī, Avesta sušī, a lung, we see that it is an example of the fact that Kāshmīrī is not, like the Indo-Aryan languages, descended from Sanskrit, but from an earlier Aryan dialect which in some respects is akin to Eranian. Instead of being descended from the Sanskrit śrāsa-, the word must come from some Aryan dialect in which the word was šrāša-*, or something of the sort.

When this Kāshmīrī h, derived from ś or ṣ, is followed by y, ĕ, or ü-mātrā, it reverts to its original sibilant sound, and becomes again sh. Thus, the second past participle of the √pih-, given above, is pishyōv, not pihyōv, and the feminine plural of pyuh^{u}, its first past participle, is pishĕ, not pihĕ. So, the oblique singular of bāh, the twelfth lunar day, is bösh^{ü}, not böh^{ü}.

The above cases, in which ś or ṣ has become h, are all instances in which the original sibilant has been standing alone. If, on the other hand, it forms part of an original conjunct consonant, the sibilant is preserved, and is not changed to h. Thus, the Skt. śruva-, a ladle, becomes Ksh. shrŏv; and Skt. ślōka-, a verse, becomes Ksh. shrūk-.

A further stage in this development is the frequent occurrence of pairs of words, in which one word has a single sibilant, and the other has a sibilant combined with a semi-vowel such as r or w. This occurs even when the semi-vowel is not original, as in Ksh. shrōṭs- or shōṭs-, purity, compared with the Skt. śauca- Other examples are:— shrāṭh or shāṭh, a sandbank; shrôṭh^{u} or shôṭh^{u}, a corpse; shriṭhun or shiṭhun, to be congealed; so, with s, we have:— srŏg^{u} or sŏg^{u}, cheap; swāl or sāl, an invitation; swās or sās, ashes.

In pairs of words such as the above, moreover, sh and s are frequently interchanged. Thus, shrôn^{u} or srôn^{u}, moist; shranḍa or sranḍa, a bull (Skt. ṣaṇḍa-, in which there is no r); shrünḍ^{ü} or srünḍ^{ü}, a casket; shrŏng or srŏng (Skt. suruṅga-), a mine; shranz or sranz, tongs; shrav or srav, a pinhole; shrawun or srawun, to ooze; and shrukun or sukun, to force into. In Ksh. sikanj, for Persian shikanja, a clamp, we have an apparent change of sh to s; but a reference to the Avesta √skand-, from which it is derived, shows that the Kāshmīrī word is not borrowed from Persian, but is descended from an Aryan dialect which has preserved the original s, while Persian has changed the original s to sh.

The Sanskrit conjunct su optionally becomes sr (shr) in Kāshmīrī. Thus, Ksh. shrān, srān, or snān, bathing, (Skt. snāna-); srĕh or snĕh, love, (Skt. snēha-). With these compare the shrūk- < ślōka-, given above.

As explained s.v. ĕ (p. 3*a*, ll. 39 ff.), the inherent vowel of the letter sh is ĕ, not a, so that श must be transliterated shĕ, not sha. Kāshmīrīs consider that the sound of the letter y is inherent in sh, so that they write indifferently श or श्य, each of which represents the same sound, viz. shĕ. In this way, the first past participles of shēkun, to doubt, and of shērun, to arrange, are, respectively, shyūk[u] and shyūr[u], but they are quite commonly written shūk[u] and shūr[u].

sa 2 स or (among Hindūs) सा sŏ interj., a contraction of sŏhib, Sir, used in polite address by a man to a man. It is the equivalent of the Hindī jī, and is appended as a kind of vocative suffix, with or without a preceding interjection, as in nārān sŏ, hē nārān sŏ, or he nārān juv sŏ, all equivalent to 'Nārān!' used respectfully, as if we should say 'Nārān, Sir!' (cf. kot[u]-sa, p. 484*a*, l. 41; ada-sŏ or ada-kyā-sŏ, yes, Sir, p. 13*a*, ll. 45, 50; āhan-sŏ, id., p. 18*a*, l. 5) (El. sa, sah; Gr.Gr. 96; Gr.M.; L. 279, sa) so ha-sa (p. 351*b*, l. 42) and ha-sŏ (ib.), hata-sa or hata-sŏ (p. 355*b*, l. 11), and hata sŏ-hē (ib., l. 12) (H. ii, 4, 9; x, 1, 2, 5, etc.; xii, 1, 10).

With a prohibitive particle, we have ma-sŏ or (Rām. 1342) ma-sa, do not, Sir (p. 547*a*, l. 27).

Used also as a respectful interrogative suffix (Gr.Gr. 181; YZ. 494, 568). Cf. sŏb.

sihul सिहल् m. (sg. dat. sihalas सिहलस्), N. of a game formerly played by Kāshmīrī children. It is somewhat on the lines of backgammon. There are five dice, each consisting of a strip of wood, with one surface rounded and the other flat. The board consists of a circle marked on the ground with five or more radii, according to the number of players. One hundred and eighty small holes are dug in the circle, and eleven in each radius. A larger hole is in the centre where the radii meet. Each player moves his piece, starting from the centre, from hole to hole along one radius, round the circumference, and back along the same radius to the centre, its progress being regulated, as in backgammon, by throwing the dice. All five dice are thrown at once, and only those that fall round side up count. When all the players but one have got round and home, the remaining player has to pay his forfeit. This is done by each of the others putting his own five dice into the central hole and kicking them as far as he can. He then rides the loser as far as the most distant die; so also for the others

The pieces are either cowries or pice or bits of potsherd. They are liable to capture as in backgammon, and the captured piece has to start again from the central hole. If all five dice fall round side up, it allows a move of 28 holes, and the player can play again. If fewer fall round side up the scores are of course much less, e.g. if there are four, the score is ten, and so on.

sān सान् postpos. governing the abl. or optionally (in the case of singular (and occasionally plural) animate nouns and rarely inanimate nouns) the dat.; with, together with

This word is distinguished from sūtin or sūty (qq.v.) by the fact that it implies that the governed word (not the thing or person accompanied) is the appendage, the other being the principal. Thus, mölis-sūtin āv, he came with the father, implies that his father had brought him along, while mölis-sān āv, would imply that he brought his father along with him (Gr.Gr. 45; Gr.M.; W. 97, 98; Śiv. 32, 71, 313, 368–9, 377, etc.; K. 374 (with sg. an.), 687 (inan.), 879 (pl. an.), 884 (inan. but governing dat.), 1017 (pl. an.), 1093 (sg. an.)).

When governing an abstract noun in the abl. this word forms an adverb, as in ānanda-sān, joyfully, p. 35*a*, l. 21; bawa-sān, politely, p. 147*a*, l. 3; darda-sān, affectionately, p. 241*a*, l. 10; khūkhĕra-sān, nasally, p. 396*a*, l. 39; khŏkarĕra-sān, in a hollow fashion, p. 396*b*, l. 1; kharca-sān, with expenditure, p. 413*a*, l. 34; khŏshī-sān or khŏshiyĕ-sān, willingly, p. 418*b*, ll. 24, 25; kalā-kāpi-sān, entirely, p. 435*a*, l. 12; māna-sān, with deference, p. 573*a*, l. 21; rāhath-sān, p. 829*b*, l. 50; sŏkha-sān, comfortably, p. 905*b*, l. 24; sīra-sān, secretly, s.v. sīr 1 (Śiv. 36, 56, 70, 85, etc.; Rām. 55, 750, 1200, 1203, 1370, 1499; K. 169, 543, 600, 610, 877, 996–7; H. i, 6; YZ. 455; K.Pr. 26, 82).

In such adverbial phrases, pŏṭh[i] may be pleonastically added, as in sŏkha-sān pŏṭh[i], happily, comfortably, securely (Gr.M.).

This word is used in special meanings in nal-sān, pimping, p. 631*b*, l. 47; shĕrāba-sān, a cup-bearer (p. 891*a*, l. 4).

sana 1 सन । रोगविशेषः m. the combined derangement of the three humours, failure of vital force at the conclusion of some long disease when the sufferer is dying or nearing death, coma, syncope (Rām. 1487); cf. sanapāth. —dörith dyun[u] —दोरिथ् दिन् । संनिपातहेतुरोगविशेषाविर्भावः m.inf. symptoms of syncope to declare themselves. —dyun[u] —दिन् । रोगविशेषोद्भवः m.inf. syncope to come or declare itself. —lagun —लगुन् । संनिपातरुगागमः m.inf. syncope to attack a person.

sana 2 सन or occasionally (e.g. K. 105, 369) san 2 सन् or sanā सना (i.e. sana + a 3) adv. an interrogative particle indicating doubt, hesitation, anxiety or the like. It is usually added to another interrogative word. Sometimes sana (not sanā) is added to the verb of a sentence. Thus kyā-sanā khĕwān chuh (or chw-ā), (I wonder), is he eating; khĕwān chw-ā-sana is he really eating (Gr.Gr. 180). It will be observed that the interrogative particle ā (see ā 3) can be used with this word (cf. ama-kyā-s°, p. 27*a*, l. 18; kar-sanā, p. 465*a*, l. 23; kati-s°, p. 483*b*, l. 39; kot[u]-s°, p. 484*a*, l. 13; kūt[u]-s°, p. 485*a*, l. 16; kĕtha-s°, p. 488*a*, l. 30) (L.V. 39, kyā-s°; Śiv. 47 (kus-s°), 1600 (id.); Rām. (kyāh-s°, etc.) 78, 202, 221, 253, 596, 834, 1074, 1143*b*, 1306, 1348, 1366, 1391, 1408, 1421, 1492–3; K (marmā-san, why should he not die) 105, 369; (kyāh-sana, etc.) 165, 213, 287, 328, 608, 919, 1131; YZ. 187).

N. of one of the holiest of Kashmīr holy places, the sacred spring of the goddess Sandhyā, called in Sanskrit Trisandhyā. It is said at certain periods in the early summer to flow intermittently, three times during the day, and three times during the night. It is situated in the Bring Pargana in the south-east of the Valley (RT. Tr. II, 469, Sundʾbrār, El. Sandabrār, Śiv. 1168).

sond^{u} संन्दु । संबन्धी adj. (f. sünz^{ü} संञ़ू), a postposition of the genitive case, used with m.sg. animate nouns. It governs the dative case. Its original form was hond^{u}. Every masculine dative singular ends in s, as in būras, to a thief ; mölis, to a father. When hond^{u} was suffixed to such a word, the h was elided, so that the postposition apparently became sond^{u}, as in būra-sond^{u} of a thief, for būras-hond^{u}, or möl^{i}-sond^{u}, of a father, for mölis-hond^{u} (Gr.Gr. 40). See hond^{u}.

This word has the usual meaning of the genitive, viz. 'of', 'belonging to' (Gr.Gr. 40; L.V. 105, 108; Rām. 271, 509, 510, 538, 631, 957, 1332, 1439, etc.; K. 7, 30, 35, 47, 49, 66, 190, 323, 344; H. ii, 5, 6, 7, 9, etc.).

As has been seen sond^{u} is used with masculine animate nouns. Hond^{u} is used with all feminine nouns and with all plural nouns. Masculine singular nouns which indicate proper names of persons, however, take un^{u} while masculine inanimate nouns take uk^{u} (Gr.Gr. 41). There are, nevertheless, occasional exceptions. Thus, the gen. of Brahmā, the N. of a god, is Brahmā-sond^{u}, p. 121*a*, l. 34; so Vishṇu-sond^{u}, Rām. 23; Yindrāza-sānd^{i} pōṭh^{i}, Rām. 1737.

Again, sond^{u} is used with certain inanimate nouns to indicate 'made of' (Gr.Gr. 41). Thus, sŏna-sond^{u} chath^{a}r, an umbrella (made) of gold, while sŏnuk^{u} chath^{a}r, would mean 'an umbrella belonging to gold'; so marīna-sond^{u}, made of merino; pash-mīna-s°, made of cloth (p. 781*a*, l. 30); rŏpa-s°, made of silver (p. 840*a*, l. 25) (Rām. 890, 1143*j*; K. 401, 920, 1007, 1037; H. v, 1, 3–5).

sandēh संदेह m. doubt, uncertainty, apprehension, mistrust (L.V. 7).

sānd़ij सांदिज् । सर्षप: f. the mustard plant; the mustard seed (K.Pr. 184); a kind of rape plant, Brassica campestris (L. 330, sandiji). Cf. sarshĕph.

sānd़ija-phulay सांदिज-फुलय् । सर्षपपुष्पविकाश: f. the season of the flowering mustard plant (early spring). -tīl -तील । सार्षपतैलम् m. mustard-oil. -zöl^{i} din^{i} -ज़ोलि दिनि । अतिसूक्ष्मेच्छिकया प्रवर्तनम् m. pl. inf. to close the interstices of the fingers for mustard-seed, i.e. to hold a handful of mustard-seeds with the fingers tightly closed together, so that not a single tiny seed escapes; met. to scrutinize with excessive minuteness (esp. when it is absurd to do so). Hence, sānd़ija-zöl^{i} din^{i}, hĕndavĕnda nīrith ṭalān^{i}, to close the fingers tightly in order to save mustard-seed, and pumpkins to escape and run away, i.e. to be penny wise and pound foolish (cf. K.Pr. 184) sūty सूत्य [also written sūtⁱ सूति or (m.c. Rām. 1594, 1611) sūtī सूती] or sūtin सूतिन् adv. and postpos. governing dat. or abl. (El. set, seth; W. 98, sotᵗ).

A. adv. with, together, in company, as a companion [(sūty) Rām. 870, 953, 1686, 1756; K. 780; H. vii, 5; x, 11; xii, 2, 16; (sūtin) Rām. 855; K. 727]. Cf. also bel.

B. Postpos. governing dat., with, together with, associated with, (striving) with, it being implied that the person or thing accompanied is the principal, and he who (or that which) accompanies is the appendage. Thus in mölis-sūty (or sūtin) āv, he came with the father, it is implied that the father is the principal, while the son who came is the appendage, i.e. that the father brought the son along with him. If the superiority of the parties is reversed, we must use sān (q.v.) instead of sūty. Thus mölis-sān āv, indicates that the father is the appendage so that it is implied that the other brought his father along with him [Gr.Gr. 44; Gr.M.; (sūty) L.V. 57, 92; Śiv. 12, 23, 38, 69, 84, 114–5, 164, 182, 196, 240, 278, 353, 432, 519, 593, etc.; Rām. 35, 73, 88, 103, 120, 171, 176, 327, 330, 428, 435, 448, 484, 530, 611, 690, 705, 803, 848, 904, 943, etc; (in Rām. 152, 701, the postpos. governs a pron. suff. attached to a verb); K. 200–1, 211, 279, 286 (pron. suff.), 287–8, etc.; H. iii, 7, 8; v. 7, 10; vii, 6; viii, 3, 7, 11, etc.; YZ. 93, etc.; (sūtin) Śiv. 160, 527, 799, 1460, 1664, 1688; Rām. 361, 1027, 1639, 1647–8, 1677, 1691 (in the foregoing in Rām. the postpos. governs a pron. suff. attached to a verb), (governing dat.) 31, 90, 94–5, 106, 142, 317, 469, 488, etc.; K. 727 (pron. suff.), 748; H. i, 7; YZ. 23].

Occasionally, in poetry, we find this word governing the dat., when we should expect the abl. Thus (sūtin) Rām. 33, satas sūtin pūrᵘ, filled with truth; 838, tas sūtin (for tami s°) for that reason, therefore

C. Governing abl., with, by means of (indicating the instrument). Thus, shrāki-sūtin, (cut) with a knife (cf. ami-(amiy-)sūty, p. 55*a*, l. 12, p. 55*b*, l. 8; atha-s°, p. 62*b*, l. 40) [Gr.Gr. 20, sūtin; 47; Gr.M.; (sūty) L.V. 25; Śiv. 13, 17–19, 27, 51, 92, 170, 191, 239, 254, etc.; Rām. 6, 16, 47, 233, 449, 479, etc.; K. 5, 154, 165, 171, 232, 247, etc.; H. v, 4; vii, 19; viii, 7; x, 8; xii, 12, 16, 17; YZ. 35, 50; (sūtin) Śiv. 23–4, 130, 191, 269, 281, 505, 590, 746, 992, etc.; Rām. 409, 435, 457, 478, 480, 582, 703, 839, 1006, 1176, 1200, 1376, 1411, 1648; K. 646; H. ix, 5, 12; YZ. 79]; of, resulting from, with (denoting material, race, stock, etc.), in accordance with; sērĕ mĕtsi sūty, bricks (made) of clay; āba-s° (filled) with water, Gr.M.) [(sūty) Śiv. 58, 512, 919, 1200, 1245, 1474; Rām. 285, 1022; K. 231, 350, 414, 921; (sūtin) K. 984]; in consequence of, by reason of, on account of, owing to, with, by, of, through (bŏchi sūty, dying of hunger, Gr.M.) [(sūty) L.V. 83; Śiv. 26, 102, 110, 165, 167, 207, 214, 229, 248, 251, etc.; Rām. 230, 377, 533, 781, etc.; K. 13, 51, 61, 91, 175, 230, 301, etc.; (sūtin) Śiv. 128, 170, 471; Rām. 96, 199, 200, 603, 655, 828, 1117, 1189, 1192, 1194, 1210, 1221, 1374, 1377, 1379, 1545, 1567, 1618; K. 424, 625].

Instead of the ablative, we may use the ablative masculine of the genitive. Thus (from ḍĕka) ḍĕkaki sūtin, by means of the forehead; guri-sūtin or guri-sandi sūtin, by means of a horse [Gr.Gr. 47; (sūty) Śiv. 361, 1018, 1509, 1592–3, 1642; Rām. 176; K. 583; H. i, 3; v, 5; vi, 16; vii, 10, 13; x, 4; (sūtin) Śiv. 171; H. i, 4].

In this sense, it sometimes forms a kind of adverb or other indeclinable, as in avĕzᵘ-sūty, with incorrectness, i.e. wrongly, p. 71*a*, l. 5; bükṣᵘ s°, courteously, K. 574; devotedly, K. 704; dayāyⁱ-s°, with kindness, i.e. please! p. 267*a*, l. 3; Śiv. 1223, 1319; gŏḍa-s°, with the beginning, i.e. from the first, p. 277*a*, l. 41; lōla-s°, affectionately, K. 523; mana-s°, with the heart, cordially, p. 572*a*, l. 42; [(sūtin) Śiv. 192, 438, 504, 1411].

Occasionally, in poetry, we find this word governing the abl., when we should expect the dat. Thus:—(sūtin) Rām. 1097, pōshau-s° kulᵘ, a tree with flowers.

sūtin suv सूतिन् सुव् postpos. (governing dat.) in close contact with, (of place) right inside, in (or into) the very heart of (Rām. 606).

sūtinay सूतिनय्, emph. form of sūtin, with, in company with (Śiv. 647, 681).

sötiy सोतिय or sūtiy सूतिय, emph. form of sūty, as in tim chih bāzi-sūtiy dŏh nibāwān, they live only by deceit (Gr.M.; so L V. 25; Śiv. 1611; K Pr. 107, sučti; id. 208, suti dugah (i.e. sūtiy dōga), by means of pounding, by continued pounding, by blow after blow).

sūty(sūtin) anun सूत्य(सूतिन्) अनुन् m.inf. to bring with one, to bring along ((sūty) Śiv. 717, 1670; K. 494; (sūtin) Rām. 971). -bôjᵘ -बोज़ु m. one who accompanies, a companion, friend, associate (Śiv. 1832); a follower, a servant (Śiv. 169). --hyonᵘ —ह्यनु m.inf. to take a person (along) with oneself, to bring (a person) along, to bring in one's train [(sūty) Śiv. 169, 629, 805, 955, 1116, 1172, 1419–20, 1456, 1459, 1581, 1672 (pānas sūty hyonᵘ), 1836; Rām. 1039, 1100, 1323, 1554, 1698, 1758; K. 14, 21, 28, 83, 203, etc.; H. ii, 1; v, 6; YZ. 88; (sūtin) Rām. 1322; K. 647]. —nyunᵘ —निनु m.inf. to take (a person) with one, to take a person along (Śiv. 1380, 1676 (pānas sūty nyunᵘ); Rām. 953; K. 69 (pānas sūty n°), 196 (id.), 203 (id.), 283 (id.), etc.). — pakun —पकुन् m.inf. to go along in company, to accompany, be a fellow traveller (with, dat.) (Rām. 870). —pakawunᵘ —पकवुनु n.ag. (f. —pakavünᵘ —पकवंञ्), a fellow traveller (El. set-pakawun).

sūty-sūtin सूत्य-सूतिन् adv. accompanying, in company (with a person) (Śiv. 1115, 1134). sūty-sūtinay सूत्य-सूतिनय्, id. (Śiv. 636). sūty-sūtin hyonᵘ सूत्य-सूतिन् ह्यनु m.inf. to take (a person) along with one. sūty-sūty सूत्य-सूत्य adv.and postpos. with, together (with, dat.), in one company, in society (with) (Śiv. 94, 986, 1054, 1154, 1362, 1445, 1581; Rām. 871, 1779; H. vii, 5; YZ. 25). sūty-sūtiy सूत्य-सूतिय् adv., i.q. sūty-sūty (Śiv. 1186).

The word sūtin is naturally scanned in poetry as two long syllables (– –) as in Rām. 96, dapan sʰh bīma-sūtin gāsa hĕth āv, but occasionally it is scanned as ⏑ –, as in Rām. 95, korukh hārĕn-sūtin brāryau vĕsápônᵘ. In both these lines the metre is ⏑ ⏑ – – – ⏑ –. In 95 the scansion of vĕsapônᵘ is irregularly ⏑ –. Other examples of ⏑ – are Rām. 469, 530, 606, 626, 917, 1097, 1163, 1189, 1200, 1280, 1389.

sazāwal سزاول m. a collector of revenue or rent, tax-gatherer, land-steward, bailiff; a superintendent, supervisor, overseer; (in Ksh.) an officer who supervises a number of shĕkh-dars (see p. 876*b*, l. 13), or guardians of the crops (L. 402, sazawol, which perhaps represents sazawól^{u}, as a local corruption of sazāwal, by confusion with sazā, q.v.

sāzawāy सात़वाय् । वाद्यवादनवृत्तिः f. the profession of playing the musical instrument called sāz (q.v.); meton. the profession of music, a livelihood as a musician sazawöz^{u} सज़वोज़ु (cf. سازش) । अन्योन्यसंधिः f. confederacy, collusion, cabal, conspiracy.

sazzan सज़्ज़न् or (Śiv. 1206) sath-zan सथ्-ज़न् m. a good man, a virtuous man (Śiv. 20, 102, 307, 442, 588, 981, 1003, 1206, 1338, 1753, etc.).

t त ت. The seventeenth (or, if we count the aspirates ch, kh, and ph, and also the sibilant sh, as separate letters, the twenty-first) consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet when written in the Roman character, the sixteenth (or, if we count ś, śh, and z as separate letters, the nineteenth) consonant when written in the Śāradā or in the Nāgarī character, and the fourth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. Its Kāshmīrī name is tōv tö तोव् तं. It is sounded nearly like the dental t त् of India proper, but the dental colour is not so decided, and the letter is liable to be confounded with the cerebral ṭ ट् (q.v. bel.). It is also used to represent the Arabic letter ṭ ط (ṭōē), which, in Kāshmīrī, occurs only in words borrowed directly or indirectly from that language. In such cases, the ṭ ط is pronounced in Kāshmīrī like an ordinary t.

The aspirate of t त is th थ ث, which is the seventeenth (or, if we count ś, śh, and z as separate letters, the twentieth) consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet when written in the Śāradā or in the Nāgarī character. Its Kāshmīrī name is thösh[i] thö थॉशि थं.

When the letter t त् is followed, in a Kāshmīrī word, by ü-mātrā (but not when followed by i or i-mātrā) it is changed to ś श्. Thus, the nominative plural of the base rāt-, night, is röś[ü]. Similarly, ty त्य becomes ś श्, and tě त्य becomes śa श्. Thus, the 2 p.p. of katun, to spin, is kaśōv (for katyōv), and from the base tat-, hot, we have the abstract noun taśar (for tatěr), heat. In the same way, the aspirate th थ् becomes śh श्ह, as in wǫ́th[u], arisen, feminine wǫ́śh[ü]; the 2 p.p. of wǫ́thun, to arise, is wǫ́shōv (for wǫ́thyōv); and from the base wath-, free, we have the abstract noun waśhar (for wathěr), freedom. See Gr.Gr. 28; Gr.M., p. 22.

ṭ ट ٹ. The eighteenth (or, if we count the aspirates ch, kh, and ph, and also the sibilant sh, as separate letters, the twenty-second) consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet when written in the Roman character, the eleventh (or, if we count ś, śh, and z as separate letters, the fourteenth) consonant in the Śāradā or in the Nāgarī character, and the fifth consonant in the Perso-Arabic character. Its Kāshmīrī name is ār māṭa अर् माँट. It is sounded approximately like the cerebral ṭ ट् of India proper, but it is not so decidedly cerebral, being more nearly post-alveolar, so that it is liable to be confused with the dental t त् dealt with in the preceding article.

The aspirate of ṭ ट् is ṭh ठ्, the twelfth (or, if we count ś, śh, and z as separate letters, the fifteenth) consonant of the Kāshmīrī language when written in the Śāradā or in the Nāgarī character. Its Kāshmīrī name is sar māṭha सर् माँठ.

When the letter ṭ ट् is followed in a Kāshmīrī word by i, ě, or y (but not when followed by i-mātrā or ü-mātrā) it is changed to c च्. Thus, the base paṭ-, a board, has its nominative singular püṭ[ü], but its ablative singular is paci, its nominative plural is pacě, and its ablative plural pacyau. Similarly, in such cases, the aspirate ṭh ठ् becomes ch छ्. Thus, kāṭh-, a stalk, nominative singular köṭh[ü], ablative singular kāchi, nominative plural kāchě, and ablative plural kāchyau. See Gr.Gr. 29; Gr.M., p. 22.

Allusion has been made above to the tendency observable in Kāshmīrī to confuse the dental t and th with the cerebral ṭ and ṭh, respectively. So strong is this tendency that Kāshmīrī poets do not hesitate to rhyme a word containing a dental letter with another containing a cerebral. For instance, in Rām. 699, the word Yind[a]rzīth is rhymed with ḍīth[ü], and, in 872, with bīṭh[ü],—rhymes which would be unthinkable in India Proper, where there is a sharp distinction between the sound of th and that of ṭh. In the following words there is confusion between initial t (th) and ṭ (ṭh):—tāḍav or ṭāḍav, swelling; tōg or ṭōg, an elephant-goad; thŏba or ṭhŏbba, a sherd; ṭhēla, a bag, compared with the Hindī thaṭā; thanḍ, cool, compared with the Hindī ṭhaṇḍā; thingun or ṭhingun, a pretty child; thāpēra or ṭhāpēra, a slap; tālun or ṭālun, to displace; tŏṭh or ṭǫ̈ṭ[u], cotton-seed; tōth or ṭēṭh, self-conceit; tōth or ṭōṭh[ü], a filament; tōṭhun or ṭōṭhun, to be pleased; tatarārav or ṭaṭarārav, pattering; ṭyoṭh[u], bitter, as compared with Skt. tikta-, H. tītā. The following are a few examples of the same tendency in regard to letters that are not initial:—phĭtun or phĭṭun, a rag; pitun or pīṭun, to become weary; musht-, a fist, compared with Skt. muṣṭi-; and pāthun, to become, compared with pāṭhi (p. 794*a*, l. 13), may it become. There are many other similar cases that have not yet been collected.

ta 1 त conjnct. and (W. 99 ṭa; L.V. 3, 4, 13, etc.; Śiv. 12, 13, 39, 43, etc.; Rām. 22, 68, 85, 87, 98, etc.; K. 18, 21, 24, 31, 36, 53, etc.; H. i, 5; iii, 5; v, 4, 9, 12, etc.).

This conjunction is used to connect single words in the singular number, as in suh ta tsʰh, he and thou. For connecting plural words, ti (q.v.) is used in preference to ta, as in mahanivⁱ ti gupan ti āy, both the men and the cattle came (Gr.Gr. 255); but this distinction is not always observed in conversation.

If it is required to connect clauses, instead of words, biyĕ is generally used (El. s.v. tah; so Śiv. 163, 799; YZ. 82), but ta is also occasionally employed for this purpose (see Gr.M., s.v. for examples; so, e.g., Rām. 123, 135-6, 221, 867, and elsewhere).

ta sometimes has a slightly adversative sense, almost equivalent to 'but' as in jism chuh fŏnī, ta rūh chuh bŏkī, the body is mortal, and (or but) the soul is immortal (Gr.M.; K.Pr. 152, 178).

na-ta 1 न-त, and not, nor (see p. 618*a*, l. 3); yā . . . na ta, either . . . or (W. 153); na . . . ta na, neither . . . nor (W. 153); na . . . na . . . ta, not . . . nor . . . nor (L.V. 15).

ta biyĕ त बिय, conjnct. and also, moreover, (this) as well as (that) (Gr.M.; Rām. 124, 1389, 1534). ta . . . biyĕ त . . . बिय, conjnct. both . . . and (H. viii, 9). ta . . . ta त . . . त, conjnct. both . . . and.

With emph y, ta becomes tay 1 or töy 1, qq.v.

ta 2 त, conjnct. then, so, accordingly, therefore (L.V. 21, 30, 33, 42, etc.; K.Pr. 173); then, and then, and next, thereupon (L.V. 1, 4, 19, 23, etc.); then and then, thereafter, but (L.V. 98); then, so that (L.V. 66); then, indicating the apodosis of a conditional, or quasi-conditional, sentence (Gr.M.; L.V. 2, 27, 55, 87; H. ii, 7; iii, 4; vii, 9; viii, 10); or the antecedent clause of a relative clause (L.V. 61).

Sometimes ta connects a conjunctive participle with the main verb of a sentence, as in yĕḍ phŏllavith ta mŏyĕ, having distended her belly, (then) she died (Gr.M.). This last idiom is especially common in K. Typical examples will be found in K. 553, 582, 838.

Added to an Imperative, something like the Hindī tō, ta makes it polite, as in kar, do; kar-ta, please to do (Gr.Gr. 249. Cf. K. 201, 1174; K.Pr. 238, tai for tay 2, see bel.).

This word is often almost untranslatable, or equivalent to 'in fact', 'forsooth' and so on, as in bŏh ta suh zānan-na, (how can I judge him) I, in fact, don't know him (Gr.M.; H. viii, 9). Sometimes it has the force of 'still', 'nevertheless' as in katiy rūzⁱtan, ta nākhŏshʰy chuh, stay where he may, still he is unhappy (Gr.M.; so L.V. 60). It is sometimes a pure expletive, as at the end of two lines of every verse in K.

With emph. y, ta becomes tay 2 or töy 2, qq.v.

na-ta 2 न-त or na-tay न-तय् is used to mean 'or else' 'otherwise' (see p. 618*a*, ll. 4, 11); yā-tay . . . na-ta, either . . . or else (K.Pr. 239).

tā ता ऽ preposition, to, until, as far as (Rām. 259, 797, 1058 tā ba-ī-hāl, up to the present time); adv. as long as, whilst (YZ. 7).

tai another spelling of tay 1, 2, and 3, qq.v.

tao, see tāv.

ti 2 ति, adv. and conjnct. also, indeed, even, as in suh ti tsʰh ti, he also, thou also (Gr.Gr. 255); tō-ti (Hindī tau bhī), even then, etc., see tōti; kari-ti, he will indeed make (Gr.Gr. 180; Gr.M.; W. 99, 153; L.V. 32, 48, 106; Śiv. 3, 21, 73, 119, 171, 211, 364, 498, 582, 622, 656 (tī m.c.), 704, and elsewhere; Rām. 166, 216, 236, 262, 295, etc.; K. 18, 20, 26, 48, 61, etc.; H. ii, 4; vi, 11; viii, 5, 8, etc.; K.Pr. 146).

ti is also used as a conjnct. connecting plural words (ta 1, q.v., being used to connect singular words), as in mahanivⁱ ti gupan ti ay, both the men and the cattle came (Gr.Gr. 255; W. 153; Śiv. 1776; H. iii, 8). ti na . . . ti na, neither . . . nor (W. 153). ti ta ति त conjnct. and also (K. 611). titi 1 ति ति, that also (K. 582), see tih, but ti . . . ti 2, ति . . . ति, conjnct. both . . . and (H. x, 13; xii, 12).

Added to an indefinite pronoun, it strongly emphasizes the indefiniteness, as in kāh ti, anyone even, anyone at all (p. 390*a*, l. 12; H. i, 5; vii, 23); kĕh ti nā, nothing at all (L.V. 9, 11; so Śiv. 1072, 1476; Rām. 710, 1295, 1492; K. 78, 87, 97, etc.); kāṯh ti nō sath, no substance at all (L.V. 41); kŏh ti na khĕth, no harm at all (L.V. 77); so kāh ti (Rām. 164, 1497); kĕh ti (H. viii, 9).

tih तिह् । तत् pron. dem. (in a compound, or in an idiomatic phrase approaching the nature of a compound, this word sometimes takes the form ti ति; for examples, see bel.) that (not within sight).

(sg. nom., an m. suh सुह्, f. sŏh स्वह् or sa स; inan. tih तिह्, also written ti ति. Acc.-dat., an. e.g. tamis तमिस् or tas तस्; inan tath तथ. Ag., an.m. tàm¹ तंमि, f. tami तमि; inan. tàm¹ तंमि. Abl., an. and inan. e.g tami तमि or tawa तव. Gen., an. m. and f. tàm¹-sondᵘ तंमि-संदु or tasondᵘ तसंदु; inan. e.g. tamyukᵘ तम्युकु or tawukᵘ तवुकु.

In the plural there is no distinction between an. and inan., and gender is distinguished only in the nominative case. Thus, nom., m. tim तिम्, f. tima तिम. Acc.-dat. e.g. timan तिमन्. Ag. and abl. e.g. timau तिमौ. Gen. timan-hondᵘ तिमन्-हंदु or tihondᵘ तिहंदु. For most of the above forms, see Gr.Gr. 88 and Gr.M. See also the references bel.

In the sing. this pronoun is an. or inan., and the an. forms in some cases distinguish between the masc. and fem. genders. As regards the plural, see above.

When this word is used as an adjectival pronoun, the inanimate forms, with one exception, are not employed. The only exceptions are tath तथ्, the inan. dat. sing., and (very rarely) tih तिह्, the inan. nom. sing. The former is used only as an adjective when agreeing with an inan. noun of either gender in the dative singular. In other cases, when an adjectival use is required, the animate forms are used, according to gender, even when agreeing with an inan. noun, except that the adjectival feminine dative is tami तमि as well as tamis तमिस, although, when used substantively, only the an. form tamis तमिस् is used for the feminine as well as for the masculine. When agreeing with a genitive, the usual rule for adjectives is observed. When the genitive is the genitive of a masculine singular inanimate noun, and therefore ends in ukᵘ, etc., the pronoun is put into the ablative singular, and, when the genitive is not of this description, the pronoun is put into the dative singular. Thus, suh (not tih) jahāza, that ship; sa (not tih) shĕlph, that art; but tath (not tas or tamis) kulis, to that tree (inan. m. sg. dat.); tath kāmĕ, for that work (inan. f. sg. dat.); tami (m. sg. abl.) chīzukᵘ, of that thing; tas (m. sg. dat.) sŏhiba-sondᵘ, of that gentleman; tami (not tamis) jyāyĕ-hondᵘ, of that place.

It therefore follows that the nominative singular inanimate form tih, it, that, is hardly ever used as an adjective, but is used almost always as a substantive. But suh and sa, the masculine and feminine forms, are also used as substantive inanimate forms, instead of tih, when the pronoun is correlate to a preceding adjective pronoun that (as all these pronouns follow the same rules) is used, though inanimate, in the animate masculine or feminine gender, as explained above for adjectival suh and sa. The preceding pronoun is usually the relative, as in yus asbāb tŏhĕ hyotᵘwa, suh (not tih) chuh drŏgᵘ, what property you purchased, that is dear; yĕmi murāda khŏtˢra tĕ sōzōthas bŏh, suh (not tih) sapodᵘ pūra, the purpose for which you sent me has been fulfilled; tĕ yŏssa kitāb mĕ lüzᵘth, sa (not tih) āyĕ mĕ khŏsh, the book which you sent me, was acceptable to me. The preceding pronoun is not necessarily a relative; thus, suh phal chuh tŏkᵘ, suh (not tih) ma khĕh, that fruit is sour, do not eat it.

When, however, the demonstrative pronoun is correlate to a substantive inanimate pronoun, tih is used, as in yih bŏh wanān chus, tih chwā pozᵘ kina apozᵘ, is what I say true or false? Also, as the pronoun yih, this (not the relative pronoun yih, what), in the direct singular, is the same in form for both genders, whether animate or inanimate, when the substantive demonstrative pronoun is correlate to it, it is, in the direct singular, always tih, not suh or sa. Thus, yih (adj. m. inan.) sôruy kur^{a}koṭ^{u} kyāzi chuh yiti pyō-mot? tih nih tulith, why is all this refuse here? take it away.

In the plural nominative the masculine agrees with all masculine nouns, and the feminine agrees with all feminine nouns, without any distinction between animate and inanimate. But, if the adjective pronoun agreeing with a feminine nominative plural is separated from it by some word that does not indicate its gender by its form, then the masculine form of the plural pronoun is used instead of the feminine. Thus, tim (not tima) z^{a}h pacĕ (fem. plur. nom.), those two boards, but tima pacĕ, those boards. The other cases of the plural are all of common gender, and make no distinction between animate and inanimate. [For ab. generally, see Gr.M. s.v. tih.]

त्स त्स ت. The nineteenth consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet in the Roman character, the eleventh when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, and the ninth when written in the Perso-Arabic character. The Kāshmīrī name for the character त्स, as well as for च (ca), is tsāṭuv tsö. It has approximately the sound of ts in the English word 'catsup', but is more dental. The aspirate of tsa is tsha छ چھ, called in Kāshmīrī tsṭiñ tshö, the twelfth consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character. The sound is approximately that of tsh in the English words 'cat's head', not that of 'cat-shark', but is more dental.

In some books printed in the Persian character, the letters ژ and ژھ, instead of ت and چھ, respectively, are used to represent these sounds.

Regarding the relationship existing between c, ch, and ts, tsh, respectively, see Art. c, p. 156*a*, ll. 9 ff. To this may be added that it is difficult to formulate any general rule according to which, in Kāshmīrī, an original c, ch, remains as c, ch, or becomes ts, tsh. As a very rough rule, it may be said that, in the case of words borrowed directly from other languages, such as Persian or Sanskrit, an original c, ch, is preserved unchanged, but that when the word becomes thoroughly incorporated into the language, it tends to become ts. It thus happens that there are several words in an intermediate stage of adoption, in which both sounds are used at option in the same word. An example of this is the Persian word camca, a spoon, which becomes both cōca and tsōca in Kāshmīrī. As a rule, however, in most words borrowed from Persian the c is preserved unchanged. As regards words borrowed from Sanskrit, the case is different, an original c being in many instances changed to ts. Thus, Skt candi > Ksh. tsandī, N.P.; candra- > tsandᵃr, the moon; candana- > tsandan, sandalwood; caraṇa- > tsaran, a foot; cit > tsëth, the mind; carâcara- > tsarātsar, the whole creation; âcamana- > ātsaman, sipping; ācāra- > ātsār, behaviour; gōcara- > gōtsar, range; kāca- > kātsh, glass; mucukunda- > mutsukund, N.P. On the other hand, Skt. chatra- > Ksh. both chathᵃr and tshathᵃr, an umbrella; and chala- > both chal and tshal, deceit. Similarly, in pure Ksh. words, we have both chapun and tshapun, to be hidden; chörᵘ and tshörᵘ, hurry; cīrⁱ and tsyūrᵘ (for tsīrᵘ), a certain plant, and other such pairs.

The letters ts and tsh are often of secondary origin. When a dental t or th (not the cerebral ṭ, ṭh) is followed by ü-mātrā*, it becomes ts or tsh, respectively. Thus, the base of rāth, night, is rāt-, and this becomes rötsᵘ in the Nominative Plural; the √kat-, spin, forms its 1 p.p. kotᵘ, with a feminine kütsᵘ; the Nominative Plural of kŏth, a hank, is kŏtshᵘ; and the √wŏth-, rises, has its 1 p.p. wǒthᵘ, fem. wŏtshᵘ. Again, when these letters are followed by ĕ (i.e. ya) or by y, they also become ts and tsh, respectively, and at the same time ĕ becomes a, and y is dropped. Thus, the adjective totᵘ, hot, has for its base tat-. The abstract noun is formed by adding ĕr (i.e yar) to the base, and is therefore tatsar, heat, with ĕ becoming a; the 2 p.p. of √wŏth- is formed by adding yōv, so that it is wŏtshōv, with drooping of the y. For further particulars, see Gr Gr. 18 ff., and Gr.M. p. 22.

tsā त्सां (? tshā छां) m. according to El. (s.v. tsâu) this word means 'salt' (which is imported into Kashmīr from Ladakh and the Panjāb). The word is a corruption of the Ladakhī Tibetan tsha.

Ag. tsĕ च्ह (Gr.Gr. 87; L.V. 64; Śiv. 87, 360, 410, 594, etc.; Rām. 154, 195, 214, 256, 576–7, 744, etc.; H. i, 12; ii, 11; xii, 20; YZ. 59);

Gen. cyôn^{u} च्योन् (Gr.Gr. 12, 56, 87; L.V. 72; Śiv. 153, 156, 168, 197, etc.; Rām. 567, 662, 771, 782, 791, 810, 845, 850; K. 30, 38, 86, 137, 356, etc.; H. v, 9; vi, 3; viii, 3, 11, etc.);

Plur. nom. tŏh^{i} त्यहि (Gr.Gr. 27, 87; L.V. 91; Śiv. 393, 683, 693, 883; Rām. 270, 476, 514, 528, etc.; H. viii, 3, 5, 13; xii, 1; YZ. 198);

Acc.-Dat. tŏhĕ त्यह (Gr.Gr. 26, 87; Śiv. 881; K. 54, 63, 89, 274, 473, 1140; H. x, 5, 12);

Ag. tŏhĕ त्यह (Gr.Gr. 87; Śiv. 82, 1249, 1447; Rām. 126, 1474; H. x, 12);

Gen. tuhond^{u} तुह्न्दु (Gr.Gr.; Śiv. 838, 883, 1249, 1295; Rām. 270, 1299; K. 54, 274, 460; H. ii, 2; xii, 15).

Of the above forms, cyôn^{u} and tuhond^{u} are really possessive pronouns, and are dealt with separately, s vv., qq.v.

As in the case of other personal pronouns, this pron. has a series of pronominal suffixes used with verbs. The suff. of the sing. nom. is kh ख्, of the acc. and ag. is th थ्, and of the dat. y य्. If the verb is in the third person, the suff. of the sing. acc. is y य्, not th थ्. For all cases of the plur. the suffix is wa व. These are added directly to forms ending in vowels, but, when added directly to forms ending in a consonant, the suffixes of the singular take a अ as a junction vowel. Examples are, in order, poku-kh पकुख्, thou wentest; kara-th करथ्, I shall make thee; kari-y करिय्, he will make thee; koru-th कर्‍थ्, made by thee; karān chu-y करान् छुय् he makes for thee; kor^{u}-wa कर्‍व, made by you; kor^{u}-m-akh कर्‍मख्, thou wast made by me; karān chus-ath करान् छुसथ्, I make thee; karān chus-ay करान् छुसय्, I make for thee; karān chus-wa करान् छुसव, I make you. The suffix kh ख् when followed by another pronominal suffix beginning with a vowel becomes h ह् as in karān chu-h-as (for chu-kh-as) करान् छुहस्, thou makest for him. For all these, see Gr.Gr. 184 ff. In villages v व् is sometimes substituted for wa व, as khĕyĕ-v ख्यय, she was eaten by you (H. x, 12), and in karĕm-av कर्यमव, I made them for you (H. x, 6).

This pronoun is peculiar in that whenever it is the subject of, or is governed by, a finite verb, even if fully expressed, it must always also be represented by a suffix. It should, however, be understood that, in regard to the suffixes of the nominative case, the future indicative, the present conditional, the past conditional, and the present imperative, being already supplied with terminations indicating the person of the subject, never take any additional pronominal suffixes of the nominative. In all other circumstances the use of the suffixes of this pronoun, and of this pronoun alone, is compulsory, not optional. If, however, the pronoun is not directly governed by the verb, but is governed by a postposition, the use of the suffix is not compulsory. For examples, see Gr.M. s.v. t^{s}h.

tŏh¹ ठॅह । यूयम e.g pl. you (pl.) (as ab.), sometimes used respectfully for the singular, as in K. 933.

t*y ठय्, emph. form of t*li, even thou, thou alone (El. tsĕi; L.V. 42, 109; Śiv. 24, 42, 120, 168, 201, etc.; Rām 1030, 1061, 1123-4; K. 384, 466, 560, 792, 1110; H. i, 10; xii, 15).

tĕy ठय, or (K. 469) tĕy¹ ठयि emph. form of tĕ, even thee (Rām. 196, 423, 830, 1038, etc.; K. 466, 756, 1138, 1173; YZ. 57).

w, v, व, , The twentieth (or, if we count the aspirates ch, kh, ph, th, ṭh, and sh, and also the sibilant sh as separate letters, the twenty-seventh) consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet when written in the Roman character, the twenty-ninth (or, if we count ṣ, sh, and z as separate letters, the thirty-second) consonant when written in the Śāradā or in the Nagarī character, and the thirty-third consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. Its Kāshmīrī name is washĕ wö वश्‍ वॅ It is generally sounded like the bi-labial w of Panjābī, not like the dento-labial w of English, but, as in Panjābī, the sound fluctuates between that of a sound approaching that of the English w and that of a sound approaching that of an English v. As a rule, the v-sound is heard before a palatal vowel or semi-vowel, such as e, i, ü, or y, or when it is final, while the w-sound is heard in all other cases. Thus, the name of the chief river of Kashmīr (the Jehlam of India) is Vĕth, not Wĕth; 'he will become' is bövi, not bŏwi; karawun^{u}, a doer, has its feminine karavün^{u}; 'he became' is bŏvyōv, not bŏwyōw; and the word for 'wind' is wāv, not wāw. Examples of the w-sound are the first letter in wāv, just quoted; rawa, a blanket; wŏpazun, to become; and rawun, to be lost. In this dictionary, I have endeavoured throughout to represent the w-sound by w, and the v-sound by v, but I fear that I have not always been consistent, and that, especially in the earlier pages, I have sometimes written w when I should have written v, but such slips can easily be corrected by paying attention to the foregoing rules.

The character व wa is also used to represent the vowel-sound of ŏ or, when modified by a mātrā-vowel, of ǒ or ŏ (see page 4*b*, ll. 3 ff.). This only occurs when the wa व immediately follows a consonant, in which case it has this force alone and is never used with a consonantal force. Thus, बुवुन्, to become, is bŏwun, not buawun; ख़ुख्, a wound, is chŏkh, not chuakh; दुद्, milk, is dŏd, not duad, and so on, whenever व wa immediately follows a consonant. If, however, a व wa is initial, or immediately follows a vowel, it retains the sound of wa, as in वुवुन् wawun, to sow; कोर्‍व kor^{u}wa, he was made by you.

As explained on pp. 4*b*, ll. 11 ff., and 5*a*, ll. 47 ff., the sounds of ŏ and u are interchangeable in Kāshmīrī, both in speaking and writing. Indeed, most Kāshmīrīs seem to be unable to distinguish between the two, the sound that to English ears appears to be that of ŏ being that most commonly used for both. Hence, when a word containing the letter ŏ is not found in the present work, it should be looked for as if it had u instead of ŏ, and vice versa.

In Kāshmīrī, neither ŏ nor u can begin a word, a w व being prefixed to these sounds when they occur in such a position, though often omitted in writing. Thus, the Skt. upāya, a device, becomes in Ksh. wupāy वुपाय् or wŏpāy वपाय्, and the Skt. udāharaṇa, an example, becomes wudāharan वुदाहरन् or wŏdāharan वदाहरन्.

wŏñ व्यञ् or (vill.) wŏh व्यँह (q.v.) । अधुना adv. now, at this time (El. woin, ɥáin; Gr.Gr. 156; Gr.M.; W. 94, woni; Śiv. 11, 69, 70, 72, 91, 131, 202, 335, 361, 378, 415–6, 425, 539, etc., passim; Rām. 114, 126, 161, 164, 199, 200, 271, 334, 395, 468, 490, 506, etc., passim; K. 307, 473, 587, 796, 1023; H. v, 6; vii, 26; viii, 7; YZ. 94, 230). The underlying implication of this word is that the action referred to has not previously existed, but is now begun, and, if the verb is in a future tense or in the imperative, will be carried on in future. Thus wŏñ kari implies that (he has hitherto not done it) but will now do it (so Śiv. 69, 70, 72, etc.; Rām. 202, 234, 241, 293–4, 300, 340, 475, 489, etc.; K. 89, 471).

wuñ वुञ् or wuñĕ वुञ । अधुनैव adv. even now, at this very time (excluding all implication of past or future time), now (El. wanyi; Gr.Gr. 156; Gr.M.; W. wun; L.V. 99, wuñĕ; Śiv. 318, 943, wuñ; 210, 1217, 1294, 1598, wuñĕ; Rām. 146, 150, 173, 268, 361, 365, 505, 553–4, 556, etc., wuñ; 216, 289, 357, 674, 691, 1488, 1490, 1495, 1523, 1622–3, wuñĕ; K. 66, 264, 357, 363, 565, 633, wuñĕ; H. (wuñ) ii, 5; iii, 1, 2; v, 5, 6, 8; viii, 7, 10–1; ix, 4, 6; x, 5–7; xii, 6, 15, 18–9; (wuñĕ) x, 1; YZ. (woñih) 546; K.Pr. 13 (wúnɨ)). -kĕn -क्यन् adv. now at present, etc., see wuñĕkĕn.

wuñᵘkuy वुञ्कुय् । आधुनिक: adj. (f. wuñᵘcᵘy वुञ्चूय्), of, or belonging to, the present time, of nowadays.

wuñis-tām वुञिस्-ताम or -tāmath -तामथ । वर्तमानकालपर्यन्तम adv. up to now, hitherto (in time) (W. 94, wunuktám, for wuñukᵘ tam; K.Pr. 236, wunuktám).

wôñᵘ 1 वोञ् m the form which pôñᵘ, water, takes when it is the second member of a compound word. See p. 746*b*, ll. 37 ff. Numerous examples are there given, and the following are here given in addition:— gölin-w°, p. 285*b*, l. 36; matʲ-w°, p. 602*a*, l. 50; pañĕ-w°, p. 748*a*, l. 46; rasᵃri-w°, p. 844*a*, l. 40; sābüñᵘ-w°, p. 862*b*, l. 5; shĕkar-w°, p. 878*b*, l. 44; shīna-w°, p. 885*a*, l. 18; shrāna-w°, p. 893*b*, l. 39; shrŏṭsi-w°, p. 896*a*, l. 43; shŏṭh-w°, p. 899*b*, l. 37; sĕki-w°, p. 905*a*, l. 16; sĕnda-w°, p. 918*b*, l. 28; sᵃsari-w°, p. 942*a*, l. 17; sŏta-w°, p. 947*a*, l. 7; siwan-w°, p 954*a*, l. 31; tata-w°, p. 1039*b*, l. 31; thĕṭʲ-w°, p. 1066*b*, l. 7; tsítra-w°, p. 1087*a*, l. 46; wuga-w°, p. 1101*b*, l. 15; wājʲ-w°, p. 1107*a*, l. 18; wanda-w°, p. 1122*b*, l. 28; vĕtha-w°, s.v. vĕth; waṭakh-w°, s.v. waṭukh) (W. 115, wonᵘ).

wā 1 वाँ (for 2, see wôñᵘ 2, for 3, see s.v.). We have seen above that pôñᵘ becomes wôñᵘ when the second member of a compound word. As explained on p. 746*b*, ll. 35 ff. when pôñᵘ is the first member of a compound word, it becomes pā, as in pā-ath, a water-flood, and numerous other examples given on p. 747*a*, ll. 25 ff. There remains the case when pôñᵘ is not only the second member of a compound word, but is followed by a third member, — when in fact it falls in the middle of a compound word In such case it becomes wā 1. Examples are kándʲ-wā-ḍulᵘ, a cauldron-water-cistern, i.e. a vat for storing water for cooking purposes, p 455*a*, l. 4; kándʲ-wā-manḍulᵘ, pot-water-scouring, i.e. scouring out a pot with water, p. 455*a*, l. 7; thĕṭʲ-wā-ḍulᵘ, a tub for dirtied water, p. 1066*b*, l. 3.

wôñᵘ 2 वोञ् । वणिक्, साध्वाचार: m. (sg. abl. wāni वानि. When this word is the first or middle member of a compound word it generally takes the form wā वा (Gr.Gr. 74); for wā 1, see wôñᵘ 1, for 3, see s.v. For examples, see bel. The fem. of this word is wāñĕñ वाञ्, q.v.) a shopkeeper (cf. wān 1), trader, merchant (cf. ashĕd-w°, p. 48*b*, l. 17; bŏng[a]ri-w°, p. 113*a*, l. 45; burza-w°, p. 131*a*, l. 7; bŏṭa-w°, p. 138*b*, l. 44; kapar-w°, p. 463*b*, l. 49; mŏkhta-w°, p. 561*a*, l. 19; nūna-w°, p. 641*a*, l. 35; pāṭ[i]-w°, p. 789*b*, l. 37; puy-w°, p. 813*a*, l. 5; tila-wôñ[u], p. 999*a*, l. 24; tŏmla-w°, p. 1006*b*, l. 34; traṅg[a]ri-w°, p. 1028*b*, l. 3. Although the idea of 'shopkeeper' or 'seller' is always present in the above, these compounds often also include the idea of 'manufacturer, who sells his products'. Thus, tīla-wôñ[u] is not only an 'oil-seller', but also a man who prepares oil for sale) (El. wáṅgi, wŏṅn, an oilman, shopkeeper; Gr.Gr. 38, 74; L. 387, 464, wáni; W. 136, wan[1]; Śiv. 240, 1876; YZ. 67; K.Pr. 20, 31 (wana), 154, 228-9);

y 1 य ي. The twenty-first (or, if we count the aspirates ch, kh, ph, th, ṭh, and sh, and also the sibilant sh, as separate letters, the twenty-eighth) consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet when written in the Roman character, the twenty-sixth (or, if we count ṣ, tsh, and z, as separate letters, the twenty-ninth) consonant when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, and the thirty-fifth consonant when written in the Perso-Arabic character. Its Kāshmīrī name is yāwa yö याव यो, and it is sounded like the y in the English word 'yes'.

As in the case of the letters ñ and sh, the inherent vowel of this letter is ĕ, not a, so that य must be transliterated yĕ, not ya. Thus, for example, यछ्, bad, is in this Dictionary transliterated yĕch, not yach; यव, yesterday, is transliterated yĕwa; and नियम, a rule, is transliterated niyĕm.

When the syllable yĕ immediately follows a consonant, it is sounded as ĕ, not as yĕ, and is, in fact, the usual representative of the vowel ĕ in writing. Thus, व्यठ् is the only way of spelling Vĕth, the Ksh. name of the River Jihlam, and व्यञ represents bĕñĕ, a sister. For the further changes of this ĕ under the influence of mātrā-vowels, see p. 3*a*, ll. 14 ff. In the Perso-Arabic character, the sound of ĕ is represented by zēr, so that for these two words we have بِیٚ, and بِنٛ, respectively.

In Kāshmīrī, the sounds of ĕ, i, and ī cannot begin a word or syllable. Even if they are so written, they are always, in such a position, sounded as if a y was prefixed. Thus, initial ē is sounded as yē, initial i as yi, and initial ī as yī. In this way ēr, wool, is pronounced yĕr; ih, this, is pronounced yih; and īran, an anvil, is pronounced yīran. In the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, such an initial letter is optionally written with or without the य्, so that these three words may be written एर् or येर्, or इह् or यिह्, ईरन् or यीरन्, respectively, but they are always pronounced with the initial y, as yēr, yih, and yīran, and are so spelt in the Roman character in this Dictionary. In the Perso-Arabic character, the initial y is usually written as in یٕر, یہ, یٖرٕن, respectively. The only exceptions occur in the transliteration of a few Sanskrit words, as in اِیشُر, for yīshŏr, i.e. Skt. īśvara.

Kāshmīrī follows other Dardic languages in optionally inserting a y-sound before a non-initial u-sound, exactly as in English the word 'duty' is pronounced 'dyuty'. As the insertion of this y-sound is optional, and largely depends upon the personal equation of the speaker, it is rarely indicated in writing, but written doublets do occasionally occur, such as tuz^{u} or tyuz^{u}, a radish, and ṭūṭh^{u} or tyūṭh^{u}, a certain bird. Extreme instances of this are found in the Kāshmīrī words for 'thou' and 'two'. The original word for 'thou' was tū. This became tyū, but under the ordinary phonetic rules of the language (cf. p. 960*a*, l. 26) the ty became ṣ, so that tyū became ṣū. Then, under another phonetic rule, ū became ^{a} (cf. m^{a}tra- < mūtra-, s^{a}tra- < sūtra-, and the Persian pronunciation of tū, thou, and dū, two, as tŭ and dŭ, respectively), so that the next stage was ṣ^{a}. To this, in order to aid the pronunciation, hă-ĕ-nukhṭaṭi was added, and the final Kāshmīrī form is ṣ^{a}h. It may be added that, while this word is usually written त्रू or त्रु in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, in some MSS. we find the word regularly written त्रू or च्यू. The history of the word for 'two' follows exactly the same lines, viz. dū > dyū > zū > z^{a} > z^{a}h.

yōginī योगिनी f. a certain female attendant on Shiv (Śiva). There are sixty-four of these, and they are all invoked, under the title of 'mothers', at the religious ceremony called Diva-gŏn (q.v. p. 261*b*, l. 2) (L. 260, Śiv. 730).

yĕgñ or yĕjñ यज्ञ्, yĕgᵃñ यग्ञ् or yĕgañ यगञ् । यज्ञः m. (among Hindūs) a sacrificial rite, a sacrifice (Śiv. 8, 51, 70, 72, 76, 78, 106, 120, 311, 313, 321, 374, 385, 388, 523, 756, 1426, 1881; Rām. 1679, 1685, 1730; K. 96, 305, 307, 316, 1047, 1054, 1070).

yāgar यागर् in yāgar pachiñ यागर् पछिञ् । गृध्रपक्षिविशेषः f. a legendary bird of monstrous size, capable of carrying away animals as large as a horse, like the roc of the Arabian Nights (Rām. 316, 694).

yigīr द्गीर् in yigīr bigīr द्गीर् बिगीर् । ग्रहणप्रवृत्तिः f. catching hold of a person in order to stop him (either a habit of doing this or a single occasion).

yĕgarāwun यगरावुन् । स्नेहदाहगन्धः m. (sg. dat. yĕgarāwanas यगरावनस), the evil smell of burning oil or the like.

yōgēshŏr योगेश्वर् or yōgīshŏr योगीश्वर् m. one who is an adept in, or master of, deep and abstract contemplation, and who has thereby obtained superhuman faculties (K. yōgī° 437); a name, or title, of Shiv (Śiva) (Śiv. yōge° 866, 1215, 1639; K. yōgi° 969).

yōgy योग्य् adj. e.g. fitting, worthy, proper (as in karunᵘ yº, worthy to be done; daṇḍas yº, worthy of punishment) (Gr.M.).

[Sg. nom. an. and inan e.g. yih इह् or (vill.) yuh 1 युह्, yuh^{u} 1 इहु or yüh^{u} यंहू, also (in compounds) written yi इ. Acc.-dat. an. e.g. yimis इमिस्, or nŏmis न्वमिस्, or (vill.) nĕmis न्वमिस्; inan. yith इथ्, or nŏth न्वथ्, or (vill.) nĕth न्यथ्. Ag. an. and inan. m. yim^{i} इमि or nŏm^{i} न्वंमि, f. yimi इमि or nŏmi न्वमि. Abl. an. and inan. e.g. yimi इमि, yiwa इव, or nŏmi न्वमि. Gen. an. e.g. yim^{i}-sond^{u} इमि-संन्दु, yisond^{u} इसंन्दु, or nŏm^{i}-sond^{u} न्वंमि-संन्दु; inan. yimyuk^{u} इम्युकु or nŏmyuk^{u} न्वम्युकु. In the plural there is no distinction between an. and inan., and gender is distinguished only in the nominative case. Thus, nom. m. yim इम, f. yima इम; or m nŏm न्वम्, f. nŏma न्वम. Acc.-dat. yiman इमन or nŏman न्वमन्. Ag. and abl. yimau इमौ or nŏmau न्वमौ. Gen. yiman-hond^{u} इमन्-हंन्दु or yihond^{u} इहंन्दु, or nŏman-hond^{u} न्वमन्-हंन्दु or nŏhond^{u} न्वहंन्दु. For most of the above forms, see Gr.Gr. 89, 90, and Gr.M. See also the references below.]

In the sing. this pronoun is an. or inan., and the an. forms in some cases distinguish between the masc. and fem. genders. As regards the plur., in this respect, see ab. In both numbers, it will be observed that, except in the nom. sing., an otherwise obsolete base nŏth न्वथ्, etc., can be used instead of the more regular forms yith इथ्, etc. This is most common in the sing., and is chiefly colloquial.

When written in the Nāgarī character, all the forms of this pronoun are usually written with an initial इ (instead of यि) in order to distinguish it from the Relative Pronoun yih 2 यिह्.

When this word is used as an adjective pronoun, the inan. forms yith इथ् and nŏth न्वथ् are employed when agreeing with an inan. noun of either gender in the dative singular. Thus, yith kulis इथ् कुलिस् or nŏth kulis न्वथ् कुलिस्, to this tree. When agreeing with a genitive, the usual rule for adjectives is observed. Thus, yimis (or nŏmis) sŏhiba-sond^{u} इमिस् (न्वमिस्) सोहिब-संन्दु of this gentleman, but yimi (or nŏmi) cīzuk^{u} इमि (न्वमि) चीज़ुकु of this thing.

In the plural nominative the masculine agrees with all masculine nouns, and the feminine agrees with all feminine nouns, without any distinction between animate and inanimate. But, if the adjective pronoun agreeing with a feminine nominative plural is separated from it by some word that does not indicate its gender by its form, then the masculine form of the plural pronoun is used instead of the feminine. Thus, yim (not yima) z^{a}h pacĕ (fem. nom. plur.) इम (not इम) ज़ह् पच्च, these two boards, but yima pacĕ इम पच्च, these boards. The other cases of the plural are all of common gender, and make no distinction between animate and inanimate. [For ab. generally, see Gr.M., s.v. yih 1.]

yih 2 यिह् । यत् pron. rel. who, which, that.

[Sg. nom. an. m. yus युस् or yus^{u} यिसु; f. yŏssa य्यस्स or (vill.) yĕssa यस्स; inan. yih यिह्, also (in compounds) written yi यि, or (old) yuh^{u} 2 युहु or yuh 2 युह्. Acc.-dat. an. e.g. yĕmis यमिस् or yĕs यस्; inan. yĕth यद्. Ag. an. m. yĕm^{i} यंमि; f. yĕmi यमि; inan. yĕm^{i} यंमि. Abl. an. and inan. e.g. yĕmi यमि or yĕwa यव. Gen. an. e.g. yĕm^{i}-sond^{u} यंमि-संन्दु, yĕsond^{u} यसंन्दु, or yĕs यस्; inan. yĕmyuk^{u} यम्युक्. In the plural there is no distinction between an. and inan., and gender is distinguished only in the nominative case. Thus, nom. m. yim यिम, f. yima यिम. Acc.-dat. e g. yĕman यमन् or yiman यिमन्. Ag. and abl. yĕmau यमौ or yimau यिमौ. Gen. yĕ(yi)man-hond^{u} य(यि)मन-ह्न्दु or yihond^{u} यिह्न्दु. For most of the above forms, see Gr.Gr. 88–9 and Gr.M. See also the references below.]

In the sing. this pronoun is an. or inan., and the an. forms in some cases distinguish between the masc. and the fem. genders. As regards the plural, see ab.

When this word is used as an adjectival pronoun, the inanimate forms, with one exception, are not employed. The exception is yĕth यद्, the inan. dat. sing. It is used as an adj. when agreeing with an inan. noun of either gender in the dat. sing. In other cases (except in the old language of L.V.), when an adjectival use is required, the animate forms are employed, according to gender, whether agreeing with an animate or inanimate noun, as in yus sŏhib, what gentleman, i.e. the gentleman who; yŏssa triy, the woman who; yus (not yih) jahāza, the ship which; yŏssa shĕlph, the art which, but (L.V. 8) yuh nām (not yus nām), the name which. An exception is that the adjectival feminine dative is yĕmi यमि, not yĕmis यमिस्, although, when used substantively, the an. form yĕmis यमिस् or yĕs यस् is used for the feminine as well as for the masculine. Thus, yĕmis sŏhibas, to the gentleman who; yĕmi triyĕ, to the woman who. When agreeing with a genitive the usual rule for adjectives is observed. When the genitive is the genitive of a masculine singular inanimate noun, and therefore ends in uk^{u}, etc., the pronoun is put into the ablative singular. Thus, yĕmi cīzuk^{u}, of what thing, i.e. of the thing which. When the genitive is not of this description, the pronoun is put into the dative singular, as in yĕmis (or yĕs) sŏhiba-sond^{u}, of the gentleman who.

For the use of the demonstrative pronoun tih, as the correlative of this pronoun, see p. 966*b*, ll. 22 ff.

In the plural nominative the masculine yim यिम agrees with all masculine nouns, and the feminine yima यिम with all feminine nouns, without any distinction between animate and inanimate. But if the adjective pronoun agreeing with a feminine nominative plural is separated from it by some word that does not indicate its gender by its form, then the masculine form of the pronoun is used instead of the feminine. Thus, yima pacĕ, the boards which, but yim (not yima) z^{a}h pacĕ, the two boards which. For ab. generally, see Gr M., s.v. yih 2.

This pronoun is often repeated in various idiomatic senses, as in yus^{u} yih dapay, he who will say what to thee, i.e. whoever will say anything to thee (L.V. 20); yĕs yih rōsĕ, to whom what is pleasing, i e. whatever is pleasing to each (L.V. 21); yih yih karm, whatever work (L.V. 58); yuh^{u} yih karm, whatever act (L.V. 61); yĕm^{i} yus zôn^{u}, he who knew whom (Śiv. 449); yĕmis yĕmic^{u} yiṣṭshā, whoever has a wish for anything (Śiv. 1085); prayĕn ôs^{u} yĕs yih, to whomever anything was pleasing (Śiv. 1086); yus yiy mangiy, whoever would ask anything from thee (Śiv. 308); yus yus, whoever (K. 430, 992); yih yih (K. 863) or yiy yiy (K. 323), whatever; yus yus yĕth yĕth kāmi lagihē, whoever was allotted to each particular work (K. 1067); yĕs yus gaṭshi, that which is necessary for a particular person (K.Pr. 243); yus yĕs zāni, he who knows a particular person (K.Pr. 256). to grow, increase, swell, be inflamed (cf. bāna y°, p. 109*b*, l. 20 , tumücᵘ yiñᵘ, p. 1006*a*, l. 30) ; to rise, overflow (cf. pôñᵘ y°, p. 747*a*, l. 20 ; sahᵃlāb y°, p. 881*a*, l. 36) ;

to come (on), to fit ; to be bent, or set (upon) (cf. bōlas āmotᵘ and y°, p. 105*a*, ll. 25, 35) ; to come on, come forth, pass (as urine, etc.) (cf. bōl y°, p. 105*a*, l 1) (Rām. 949).

With the present participle of another verb yunᵘ forms what some writers on Indian languages call 'Statical compounds', as in ḍĕkⁱ ḍĕkⁱ karān y°, to come along with the forehead (on the ground), p. 204*b*, l 43 ; lōrān y°, to be in a condition of wasting away, gradually to waste away, p. 532*a*, l. 27 ; sōrān y°, to become gradually used up, p. 937*a*, l. 12 ; salān y°, to come hurriedly, p. 1071*b*, l. 17 (Śiv. 101, 880, 1380, 1528, 1653 ; Rām. 207, 337, 362, 910, 915, 983, 1108, 1118, 1143*a*, g, 1148, 1193, 1308, 1338, 1406, 1699 ; K. 417 ; H. viii, 6).

With the conjunctive participle of another verb, yunᵘ forms what some writers on Indian languages call 'Intensive compounds', as in banith y°, to turn out well, p. 114*a*, l. 14 ; pōr dith y°, to act as if certain to have a long life, p. 753*b*, l. 14 ; pisith yunᵘ, to be on the point of boiling over, p. 783*b*, l. 10 ; thakun nīrith y°, fatigue to come out, i.e. to become manifest, p. 973*b*, l. 49 ; tasith y°, to come in fits of laughter, p. 1084*b*, l. 35. Some of these examples are not strictly intensive compounds, but are ordinary phrases, in which each word retains its own meaning, but it is not always easy to make the distinction (Śiv. 97, 999, 1585, 1704; Rām. 112, 271, 276, 282, 311, 339, 404, 483, 515, 594, 753, 766, 1091, 1223, 1241, 1455, 1543, 1679, 1684, 1714; K. 147, 226, 235, 624, 706, 846, 961, 1060; H. v, 1, 4, 10; xii, 12; YZ. 139, 178; K.Pr. 57). Sometimes we have the freq. part. instead of the conj. part. as in Śiv. 1245. Note hĕth yun^{u}, to bring, equivalent to the Hindī lē ānā or lānā (Śiv. 76, 668, 718, 720, 723, 730, 1667, 1831, 1836, 1856; Rām. 96, 361, 382, 659, 794, 834, 943, 1110, 1120, 1143*i*, 1144, 1440, 1464, 1631; K. 37, 337, 391, 415, 565, 685, 696, 699, 811, 871, 914, 972, 1031, 1077; H. i, 8; iii, 1; viii, 6; xii, 2, 5, 11, 12; YZ. 242).

With the oblique infinitive of another verb, yun^{u} makes a passive (cf. Gr.Gr. 168), as in buchana y°, to be stung, p. 80*b*, l. 8; bōlas lāyĕna y°, to become fixed in obstinacy, p. 105*a*, l. 33; brakana y°, to be crushed, p. 122*b*, l. 42; barana yun^{u}, to become filled, p. 110*a*, l. 18; p. 124*b*, l. 24; p. 188*b*, l. 16; p. 452*a*, l. 21; barana y°, to become homesick (pass. of an intrans. verb), p. 124*b*, l. 38; bōzana y°, to become visible (cf. Gr.Gr. 169), p. 154*a*, l. 8; chakana y°, to become scattered, p. 160*a*, l. 13; dabawana y°, p. 185*a*, l. 29; maṭi marana y°, to become fixed on the shoulder (marun 1), p. 603*a*, l. 39 (where it is wrongly explained), and many others. The passive of yun^{u} itself, occurs in phrases such as yina yiwān chuh, it is being come by him, i.e. he is coming (Gr.Gr. 168–70; Gr.M.; Śiv. 332–3, 369, 376, 437, 665, 886, 909, 1004, 1020, 1072, 1111, 1234, 1262, 1286, 1340, 1347, 1469, 1501, 1509, 1545; Rām. 3, 56, 122, 283, 298, 805, 1241, 1446, 1569, 1670, 1719; H. vii, 26; ix, 7). The examples in K. (see bel.) are bŏḍ^{a}rana y°, 358; dina y°, 77, 844; gaṇḍana y°, 167–8; khĕna y°, 1089; mubarana y°, 69, 73, 681, 857; parzanana y°, 595 (cf. parzana y°, 583, and parzanas y°, 397); pūzana y°, 1042; walana y°, 502; zēnana y°, 823; z^{a}rawana y°, 200. Regarding the pass. of bōzun, to hear (Śiv. 85, 665, 1241; H. xii, 22), see p. 154*a*, l. 8. It is also used to mean 'to be considered, known, recognized (as such-and-such)' (H. viii, 5; x, 4; xii, 3). The pass. of ḍēshun, to see, is irregular, being drēṭh yun^{u} (see p. 254*b*, l. 9) (Śiv. 104, 180; Rām. 1195; K. 159, 193, 411, 434, 436–9).

Besides the above passives formed with the oblique infinitive, K. also, metri causa, optionally forms a passive with the dative of the infinitive, but only in the case of transitive verbs. The following instances occur:— baranas y°, 507; gālanas y°, 68; gaṇḍanas y°, 165; karanas y°, 628, 970; kāsanas y°, 662; lĕkhanas y°, 848; māranas y°, 1027; mash^{ĕ}rāwanas y°, 861; pālanas y°, 1042; raṭanas y°, 163; trāwanas y°, 861; tĕnanas y°, 210, 301, 311; wuchanas y°, 295; wananas y°, 97, 290, 296, 453, 501, 589, 614, 782–3, 847, 914, 923, 1061, 1087, 1151; waranas y°, 781; zānanas y°, 78, 911, 1165; zēnanas y°, 1019. If the infinitive dative is that of an intransitive verb, it forms, with yun^{u}, a kind of inceptive compound; see ab., p. 1196*b*, l. 37. In K. 901, āv wananas is not a passive, but means 'he came to tell (the tidings)'.

āmot^{u} आमॅतु perf. part. of yun^{u} in all its meanings, see ab., p. 1196*a*, l. 41 (f āmüs^{u} आमॅसु) (Śiv. 44, 594, 678, 820, 832, 919, 1581, 1794; Rām. 145, 351, 424, 428, 493–4, 690, 757, 760, 797, 1077, 1108*e*, 1181, 1359, 1470, 1631, 1672, 1684, 1707, 1730, 1746; K. 27, 642, 806, 868, 995–6, 1089, 1096, 1108; H. iii, 1; v, 5, 11; viii, 6 (= Hindī āyā huā); x, 12, 14; xii, 23).

z ज़ z. The twenty-second consonant of the Kāshmīrī alphabet in the Roman character, the thirteenth when written in the Śāradā or Nāgarī character, and the sixteenth when written in the Perso-Arabic character. The Kāshmīrī name for the character ज़ is zày[i] zö, which is also used for the character ज (ja). It is pronounced like z in the English word 'zeal'. The characters z and ज़ are also used to represent the sound of the Persian or Arabic ذ (ẕāl), ض (ẓād), and ظ (zā), which, in Kāshmīrī written in the Perso-Arabic character, occur only in words borrowed from one or other of these languages. In such cases they are pronounced in Kāshmīrī like an ordinary z.

Regarding the relationship between j and z, see Art. j, p. 369*a*, ll. 28 ff. As there explained, it is difficult to formulate any general rule according to which, in Kāshmīrī, an original j remains as j or becomes z, or vice versa. As a rough guide it may be stated that, in the case of words borrowed from Persian, an original j or z usually remains unchanged, but that, when such a word becomes thoroughly incorporated into the Kāshmīrī, j tends to become z. The same is true of words borrowed from Sanskrit, so far as regards the change of j to z. It thus happens that there are several words in an intermediate stage of adoption, in which both sounds are employed at option in the same word. Thus, the Persian word judā, apart, becomes, in Kāshmīrī, both judā and zudā, and jigar, the liver, becomes both jigar and zigar. As a rule, however, in most words borrowed from Persian or from Arabic through Persian, a j is preserved unchanged. As exceptions may be noted such words as jūlān, fetters, which appears in Kāshmīrī as zōlāna, and maujūd, existing, Ksh. mūzūd. As regards words borrowed from Sanskrit, the case is different. While in many instances an original j of that language is preserved, in many other words directly borrowed from that language, an original j becomes z. Such, for instance, are:— Skt. jagadīśvara-, Ksh. zagadīshŏr, the lord of the world; Skt. jagat, Ksh. zagath, the world; Skt. jambukēśvara-, Ksh. zambukēshŏr, N.P.; Skt. jāmbavān, Ksh. zāmbawān, N.P.; Skt. janaka-, Ksh. zanakh, N.P.; Skt. jaṭā, Ksh. zaṭh, matted hair; Skt. jitèndriya-, Ksh. zitēndriy, one who has conquered his passions; Skt. jīva-, Ksh. zīv (compared with true Ksh. zuv), life; Skt. jīvana-, Ksh. zīwan, life; Skt. jvālā, Ksh. zwālā, glow; Skt. jyēṣṭhā, Ksh. zyēshṭhā, N.P.; Skt. ajāmila-, Ksh. azāmil, N.P.; Skt. ajapā, Ksh. azapā, silent prayer; Skt. bhuja-, Ksh. bŏz, the arm; Skt. bhōjana-, Ksh. bōzan, food; Skt. dhvaja-, Ksh. dŏz, a flag; Skt. kujāta-, Ksh. kŏzāth, baseborn; Skt. lajjā, Ksh. lazzā (compared with the true Ksh. laz), shame, and many others.

The letter z is often of secondary origin. If a dental d (not the cerebral ḍ) is followed by ü-mātrā*, it becomes z. Thus the Nominative Plural of grand, counting, is grünz[u], and the l p.p. of √lad-, build, is lod[u], with a feminine lüz[ü]. When it is followed by é (i.e. ya) or by y, it also becomes z, the é becoming a, and the y being dropped. Thus the base thad-, high, forms its abstract noun by adding ĕr (yar), and becomes thazar, height, and the 2 p.p. of √lad-, formed by adding yōv, is lazōv. For further particulars, see Gr.Gr. 28 ff. and Gr.M. p. 22.

zĕ 2 ज़ (= ز), prep. from (another form of az 2, q.v.) (Rām. 49, zĕ brahmāh, from Brahmā).

zi ज़ि, conj. that (W. 100). Employed with various forces (see Gr.M. for details).

It is used as a declarative conj. annexing the substance of a speech, etc., to the principal sentence, as in tàm^{i} môn^{u} zi yi chuh poz^{u}, he affirmed that this is true; tas pṛṣh zi cyôn^{u} nāv kyāh chuh, ask him what is his name (lit. ask him that what is your name). Note that in such cases, as in India Proper, the subordinate sentence is introduced in direct narration. Similarly after verbs expressing necessity, propriety, doubt, intention, and many others for which see Gr.M. s.v. (Śiv. 679, 1232; Rām. 360, 1108, 1137, 1671; K. 9, 63, 65, 66, 104, 113, etc.).

As a consecutive conj., that, so that, as in bŏh dōryōs tyūt^{u} zi shāh gōm band, I have run so much that I have lost my breath (so L.V 48; Rām. 261, 671, 737, 1133, 1400, 1546, 1659; K. 97, 295, 405, etc.; K.Pr. (zh) 95).

As a final conj., that, in order that, as in sa chĕh mĕh^{a}nath karān, zi pananis pānas rachi, she labours in order that she may support herself (K. 19, 38, 127, 163, etc.).

As a causal conj., that, because that, as in kyāh sabab chuh zi ṭ^{a}h rōzakh-na, what is the reason that thou wilt not remain; so yimi-kin^{i} zi, for this that, i.e. for which reason, wherefore (Śiv. 794, 841; Rām. 382; K. 169, 289, 694, etc.).

As a temporal conj., that, since, as in kĕh dŏh gay zi suh āv, some days have passed since he came.

As a conj. introducing a subordinate question, as in wuch zi ṭ^{a}h hĕkakha būzith, see if thou canst understand.

When zi is added to kyāh, the compound kyā-zi, what that? means 'why?', see s.v., p. 502*b*, l. 44.

When zi is prefixed to a relative pronoun, which is preceded, not followed, by its antecedent, it is almost pleonastic in its force. If anything, it gives a certain indefiniteness to the pronoun, as in zi yas, quasi 'anyone who' or 'whoever'. Thus tim chih timan ṭhagān zi yiman ṭhagith hĕkān chih, they cheat anyone they can.

As an adv. verily, forsooth, (almost pleonastic) (Śiv. 602-3, 619, 1818; Rām. 361, 363, 804, 857, 977, 1096, etc.; K. 448, 460, 640, 717, etc.; K.Pr. (zh) 25, 29, 33, 43, 87, 93, 233).

zi yĕmi-sūty ज़ि यमि-सूत्य conj. so that (Gr.M.). —yitha —यिथ conj. so that (Gr.M.). —yuth^{u} —यिथु conj. to such a degree that (Gr.M.).

zī ज़ी interj. a form of address, a term of endearment or respect, Sir, Master, Madam (cf. bāba-zī, p. 77*b*, l. 9) (Śiv. 132).

zu, zú, see zuv 2.

zab ज़ब । तृणविशेष: a kind of long water-grass.

zaba ज़ब (= ذبح) m. slaughtering, cutting the throat of, slaying (El.). —karun —कऱ्हन m.inf. to slaughter, cut the throat of (an animal intended for food, agreeably to Muslim law); to slay, kill, execute, put to death, destroy (El.).
